PUBLIC INPUT:

Shelly Lund of Redhorse Road, Rogue River, addressed the City Council expressing her concerns that Rogue River being was a community of senior citizens and did not feel that allowing buses of people to come into town and march to a picnic at Palmerton Park should be allowed. She felt that elderly people were more susceptible with a high death rate when contracting COVID-19 and this event was like bringing COVID-19 carriers to a senior facility and wanted to know who gave the Southern Oregon Coalition for Racial Equity permission to hold their event in Rogue River. Jackson County was on a COVID-19 watch. As she was being required to practice social distancing during the meeting why was it allowed for people to come participate and not be required to also social distance? She said that people were very upset as they should be and some of the businesses were closing for the day of the event out of fear and were losing money due to the decisions that the city had made. Children were being kept out of school, not getting a proper education due to COVID-19. However, it was okay for a bus load of people to have a peaceful protest. Everyone had been watching the news in the last 90-days had seen what was being called a peaceful protest. Blocking off streets, closing down businesses, beating and killing people made it hard to understand why the City would allow the event to happen. The event must be stopped to protect the people of this community.

Heidi Jensen of Queens Branch Road, Rogue River, addressed the City Council expressing her concerns of the risk management of the upcoming event posted by the nonprofit organization of Southern Oregon Coalition for Racial Equity. She had concerns about the organization's ability to meet to make our community whole. Should an event or a loose occur due to the liability of their actions she strongly suggested that Southern Oregon Coalition for Racial Equity provide an insurance policy to extend and protect the citizens, the community and the small businesses. In the event of an accident, an injury or illness or property damage during the peaceful demonstration requiring a certificate of insurance from them naming the City of Rogue River as an additional insured under the general commercial liability policy before extending the use and enjoyment of the City's parks.

Garth Brech of West Evans Creek Road, Rogue River, stated that the two ladies summed it up for him and he had nothing more to add.

Mayor Wayne Stuart thanked the audience for coming to the meeting and hopefully the event would happen without any problems. He commented that Palmerton Park was a free park, open to the public and people are able to talk about what they want to talk about based on the governments right of free speech along with items of the Constitution. Hopefully, the police department along with the others the City has involved on Saturday.

Police Chief Curtis Whipple commented that there had been two other parade permits had been applied for but not approved so it's something that had not been sanctioned by the City. They had been informed that they must stay on the sidewalks and out of the streets and the police department would make sure that happens. A request was made to walk from City Hall to Main Street, turning on West Evans Creek Road to Palmerton Park. He also commented that social distancing was not something that the police department regulates, it's something OSHA or OLCC would regulate.
